And he gives you a test. You have to say a certain word, a password, before he'll let you in. If you don't know it, you can never go in. But if he lets you in, then from inside you see that the door is entirely different - it's made out of horn, with a tree carved on it, and the frame is made out of a tooth, one tooth of a dragon that lived long, long before Erreth-Akbe, before Morred, before there were people in Earthsea. There were only dragons, to begin with. They found the tooth on Mount Onn, in Havnor, at the centre of the world. And the leaves of the tree are carved so thin that the light shines through them, but the door's so strong that if the Doorkeeper shuts it no spell could ever open it. And then the Doorkeeper takes you down a hall and another hall, till you're lost and bewildered, and then suddenly you come out under the sky. In the Court of the Fountain, in the very deepest inside of the Great House. And that's where the Archmage would be, if he was there..." "All right. I wanted to ask you more about various things. About the big things, the most." "My own, sir. It is Irian." Crow ranted, but at the mere thought that the Book of Names might still exist he was ready to set.Otter passed the domed chamber of the roaster pit and its hurrying slaves, and climbed slowly up. "Do what?".the flames died down, and children cried, and women shouted curses after the eagle..sign in return, "but not always safe, among strangers."
